MAPLE 1971 TRAIL

Campbellsville College, Campbellsville, Kentucky

Sue Ann Bond -- Editor

Carter Lasure -- Asst. Editor

Tom Jeffries -- Advisor

to learn . . . to live . . . to love . . . to lead . . .

the following is a responsive enlargement of an idea presented by e. h. mason, ir. according to the preliminary statement by dr. david l. jester, academic dean of campbellsville college.

so fast it's going before us. watcher's or doer's? heavier, deeper, and deeper. the walk is a run, the name and facts and images mount up. everyone his story, his autobiography.

a geometric figure to point a way. enter, what will we do with it? a triangle stands alone. around its three borders, the words:

scholarship fellowship leadership before us what? is it ludicrous to suppose they might be more than a meaningless symbol?

to learn . . .

to lead . . .

say that you will -try at least.

it's long way there, but it's the falling back that gets to you, on the way, moving on. in search of a free romp in dreams and visions on some unchartered walk, to believe enough in yourself to go the distance. to have sealed on our future frame our spirit, our longings, our fate.

the people, virile, yet fragile. wanting to whistle a hymn, hum a song of joy, sing a lullaby of liberation, the giant stage on which we stand. the world in front of us. how often to have sat back and laughed, hooted, and hailed the start of the big show. gay times, hearty, robust, cheerful. we are offered the bitter-sweet taste of participation, left for us to choose.

we are not down; only tired. getting closer to our home.

now we lay us down to last and pray to not neglect the past but when to go, and leave a cast what place to make we now must ask a litany of living loving learning leading the experience of finding how much it will finally take.

so much has flown or been flittered away, overlooked, passed up. inability to make the proper judgment can cause a storm of protest, sparking new incentive. but who will strive? who will pick up the pieces and renew himself?

to learn . . .

knowing more, searching more bravely, losing/winning, suffering, becoming estranged from gods and heroes at the dark end of a life wrapped in darkness.

to-learn where the light is.

inspiraled focused memoirs of walks with friends in a small campus forest, and towering, climactic, expectant, wondering trips aboard a leaf or stone or length of lichen stretched wonderfully before the sun . . . wanting even to raise our hands, wanting to know, the limits, and we clap like crazy.

to learn of heights and depths, of width and breadth.

we have rambled and crawled along the stacks of notes and papers floating through our fingers, inked and penciled until the words lost their meaning. we have sold, bought, borrowed and traded our way through, keeping what we could remember and stashing into boxes what we did not want to forget.

behind our eyes, someone is speaking loudly. shouting, jeering, cheering us on — "stick to it kid, decouragez ons nous pas, ca va venir, ca va venir."

yea. sure . . . it will. it will, surely surely it will. careening in the american night."

to mingle with the morning, scorched by the expectation of a new day, a new world, lobing in the lateness of the hour, piercing the leather night with gentle words and compassion, to make today a bond, a sinew of might so tomorrow will bulge with possibility.

to not be careless, to break open the shells, the hells that divide and confine us. to be present.

we are not lost – only looking more than the hurriedly written letters home; more than the scribbled notes passed behind the back; more than pledging ourselves to an emotion knocking us insensible.

how much more? how much less?

the gap is a gorge. we are leaning away.

and to live is to snap awake, rising briskly to sneak a peak at the dawn shyly giving birth, and know you will be out there. out there, it's enough just to be close to a special kind of life. we are touched amazing grace glaring gleefully, and you are there.

there is not leaving, only entering, to learn is to suggest a vacuum, but to enter brings about unlimited possibility, realization of personal potential.

acting on the present, not being acted on.

the hard fact is that the rawest obscenity cannot be spoken — but it's the life style or lack of it, that we set ourselves in. to be casual, cool, and unbothered is a dirty vocabulary that rages every living secon.

to be able to say you've cut and tried it.
it's a tough way to go, but there ain't no flower man running around promising you a rose garden; so until then . .

making a life, a family. taking the spurring moment, taming it. ever to wallow in the heaps, throwing, pitching, retrieving the re-usable.

epilogue

a new decade begun.
wonders never cease.
they appear to flourish
and transform the intricate workings of an ever enlarging nation.
